Concerning Student Access to Campus Related to the Novel Coronavirus

This is an announcement regarding a change in the university policy concerning campus access for students who have a fever. The change was made in line with the revised guidelines of the Ministry of Health concerning guidance and consultation related to the novel coronavirus.

Main policy changes:

- The standard for undergoing a consultation at the consultation center for people returning to Japan or who have had contact with a COVID-19 patient has been changed from “a fever of 37.5°C or more that lasts for four days or more” to “mild cold conditions that continue for four days or more.”
- Anyone with an underlying medical problem who has cold symptoms or a loss of smell or taste (even without cold symptoms) should contact the Health Care and Safety Center
- The policy on whether a special exemption from attending class will be granted to students who have a fever and other cold symptoms or students who are self-isolating at home for two weeks will depend on their situation with regard to being able to take part in online classes (as indicated in the diagram in “Attachment 2”).
